

How to identify phonemes and allophones

* Phonological data sets in exercises/exams should always include sufficient data to either find at least a near minimal pair or figure out the distribution, so this only really applies to working with "real" data, which may be insufficient to establish phonemehood.